

Cindy Cruea

Cindy's background includes farming on a West Central Illinois grain/livestock farm, a college degree in agri-business, employment as a soil conservationist in western Nebraska with the NRCS, and former president of National Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE). Her crop insurance career began in 1990 and progressed from agent/owner of the Triple C Crop Insurance Agency to her current position as a USDA Risk Management Specialist, in the St. Paul Regional Office. She uses her farm experience, education, and prior federal and business experience to provide a unique perspective to risk management education.

Cindy and her husband, Darrell, have four children and live in Cottage Grove, Minnesota.
