

Cheryl McMahon Griffith

Cheryl received her BS from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in Advertising and Public Relations and is completing work on an MS in Leadership Education. A Lincoln native, she grew up a city girl but spent the better part of 25 years living and working in rural southwest Nebraska, learning about agriculture firsthand. Before moving back to Lincoln she was the Information and Education Coordinator for the Middle Republican Natural Resources District in Curtis, NE. Cheryl came to the North Central RME Center in 2005 and is primarily responsible for the promotion and publicity of the Center.

Cheryl is also the Nebraska Women in Agriculture Coordinator. She is responsible for women's programming in the State which includes the annual Women in Agriculture Conference held each year in February.

In her spare time Cheryl teaches dog agility and competes around the Midwest with her shetland sheepdogs, Wylie and Chip. Cheryl and her husband Dave, a water resources planning specialist, live in Lincoln and have a daughter Alison.
